Parev-TV interviews Dr. Michael Voskian 107th Annual Meeting Banquet of the AMAA

On Thursday, September 17, 2026, Parev TV had an interview with Dr. Michael Voskian, representative of the AMAA - the Armenian Missionary Association of America. Dr. Voskian candidly discussed and shared details about the upcoming 107th Annual Meeting Banquet of the AMAA which will be held on October 17 at The Teaneck Marriot at Glenpoint Hotel. Dr. Voskian will serve as the master of ceremonies at the 107th Banquet.

One of the main questions Dr. Voskian addressed was - what makes the AMAA annual meeting and banquet such an important occasion for its supporters, friends and the wider Armenian community members?

He also spoke about the two individuals - giants of the AMAA - who will be honored, giving details about their character, dedication and contribution to AMAA. The two individuals are Rev. Sunday is not Sunday without the ARHNJ

Anoush Gulian

Serving the Armenian community for 48 years, the Armenian Radio Hour of New Jersey (ARHNJ) has become a cherished Sunday tradition. It is often said that Sunday is not Sunday without the Armenian Radio Hour of New Jersey. Yet each Sunday is different, as ARHNJ presents original current news, views, and interviews with guests. The number of young volunteers also varies from one Sunday to the next, adding a fresh and energetic dimension to the program.

In terms of interviews covering current developments, on Sunday, September 13, ARHNJ conducted a live phone interview with Ani Hovanessian, Esq., who had returned the night before from a pilgrimage to the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on the island of Akhtamar in Lake Van and other neighboring towns in Eastern Turkey.

Her detailed account of the 12-day pilgrimage was both informative and up-lifting. For many listeners, the interview offered a vivid introduction to Aghtamar, Ani, and the many other towns visited by the pilgrims in historic Armenia. The entire interview is archived on the ARHNJ website at

Mihran Mardjian, Annabelle Joukhadarian, Kayla Bajakejian

ArmenianRadioNJ.net and may listened to at any time.

The program, on September 13, also welcomed a new generation of young volunteers. Anabelle Joukhadarian, president of the Armenian Club at Seton Hall University, visited the station and participated in a short interview highlighting the activities of the Armenian Club.

“We just had our first meeting, with some 20 students attending Seton Hall, and we are planning programs for the coming year,” said Anabelle, a junior majoring in Biology.

The program was hosted by Anoush Gulian, who had been a regular volunteer several years ago. Anoush was not rusty at all. She quickly became comfortable with the newer technology that has been adopted at the station in recent years and smoothly took on her hosting responsibilities.

To witness the flow of information, the enthusiasm of the younger volunteers, and the positive spirit of cooperation among everyone at the station makes the Sunday experience truly worthwhile.

And that is why, for so many members of the community, Sunday is simply not Sunday without the Armenian Radio Hour of New Jersey—ARHNJ.

AGBU Announces One-Night-Only All-Star Entertainment Event to Cap its 94th General Assembly Weekend this October

As part of a series of events surrounding AGBU's 94th General Assembly weekend in Montreal, Canada, an unprecedented multi-genre, multimedia entertainment event called LEGACY has been organized by AGBU Arts in collaboration with People of Art Productions.

The highly anticipated and ambitious concert and immersive visual experience will take place on Saturday October 17, 2026, at 8:00 PM at Montreal's landmark Outremont Theatre. Its box office is now open for ticket purchases and selling quickly to the overall Armenian community and general audiences alike. With its international line up of established and popular Armenian talents, representing music, dance, and the visual arts, LEGACY promises to captivate audiences of all generations and cultural affinities.

AGBU Arts Director Hayk Arsenyan states: "For 120 years, AGBU has been creating opportunities for Armenians around the world and helping keep our culture and heritage alive. That's something that has always been important to AGBU. With LEGACY, we're bringing that idea to the stage by bringing together incredible musicians, dancers, and artists from different generations. Each of them brings their own story and helps keep a piece of Armenian culture alive for the next generation."

Featured Performers

Among the evening's headliners is Sebu Simonian, singer, songwriter, and keyboardist best known as one-half of the duo Capital Cities, whose hit "Safe and Sound" reached #8 on the Billboard Hot 100 and earned a Grammy nomination. Raised within the Armenian community of Los Angeles, Simonian has also collaborated with Armenian singer Sirusho. Also appearing is Emmanuel Hovhannisyan, regarded as one of the most accomplished musicians in Armenia. He serves as first duduk player at the Armenian State Orchestra of National Instruments and lead duduk player at the Gurdjieff Folk Instruments Ensemble, with which he contributed to The Voice of George Gurdjieff, released by ECM Records to wide critical acclaim.

Alongside her sister Anush, with whom she has performed since childhood, Inga represented Armenia at the Eurovision Song Contest in 2009 after winning the national final. The duo has since performed across Armenia, the U.S., Iran, and Europe.

Also featured is cellist Narek Hakhnazaryan, who at just 22 won First Prize and Gold Medal at the XIV International Tchaikovsky Competition and has since become one of the world's most sought-after musicians, praised by the LA Times for his "extraordinary" command of the instrument. Trump meets with Armenian religious leaders in U.S.

U.S. President Donald Trump has met with Armenian religious leaders in the United States and Ambassador of the Republic of Armenia to the United States Narek Mkrtchyan.

The meeting was attended by His Eminence Archbishop Hovnan Derderian and His Grace Bishop Mesrop Parsamyan, leaders of the Western and Eastern Dioceses of the Armenian Apostolic Church in the United States; His Eminence Archbishop Anoushavan Tanielian and Archbishop Gegham Khacherian, leaders of the Eastern and Western Dioceses of the Armenian Apostolic Church under the Catholicosate of the Great House of Cilicia; His Grace Bishop Mikael Mouradian, Eparch of the Armenian Catholic Eparchy of the United States and Canada; and Reverend Hendrik Shahnazarian, Minister of the Armenian Evangelical Union of North America.

A statement issued by the Embassy of the Republic of Armenia in the United States says that during the meeting, views were exchanged on Armenia-U.S. relations, the Christian-civilizational ties between the two peoples, religious freedom, as well as efforts aimed at establishing peace and stability.

The need to establish peace and strengthen mutual understanding between peoples was emphasized, highlighting the importance of faith and spiritual values in this process.

The Armenian religious leaders offered a collective prayer and sought God's blessing for the well-being and future of the peoples of Armenia and the United States, and for friendship between the two countries.

In their prayer, the religious leaders also addressed efforts aimed at establishing peace, emphasizing U.S. President Donald Trump's contribution to the peace process in Armenia.

The meeting was organized by the Embassy of the Republic of Armenia in the United States in cooperation with the White House Faith Office. Also participating were Paula White-Cain, Senior Advisor to the White House Faith Office and longtime spiritual adviser to the U.S. President, and Jennifer S. Korn, Faith Director of the White House Faith Office.

Armenia Government Plans to Recover $2 Billion in Illegally Acquired Assets

Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said his government intends to recover approximately $2 billion in assets deemed to have been acquired illegally by 2031, arguing that the state should pursue the full confiscation of illicit property.

“The anguished cries we are hearing should serve as a lesson to everyone that no one will get away with even a single penny stolen from the people and the state, no matter who they are,” Pashinyan said in parliament.

“I have said that the law must be amended and illegally acquired property must be confiscated 100 percent,” he added.

Responding to opposition criticism that the government’s asset-forfeiture process amounts to political persecution of former officials, Pashinyan argued that such claims cannot apply to individuals who became millionaires or billionaires while holding public office.

“That person should be dispossessed as soon as possible,” the prime minister said, referring to the government’s new program, which calls for recovering approximately $2 billion in illegally acquired assets by 2031.

Asked whether recovering $2 billion was realistic, Pashinyan cited the case of former Finance Minister Gagik Khachatryan, saying the value of assets alleged to have been illegally acquired in that case alone exceeded $1 billion.

“With an effective justice system, this case alone would ensure the recovery of more than $1 billion,” Pashinyan said.

The government’s 2026–2031 program includes a goal of returning approximately $2 billion worth of assets deemed to be of illegal origin to the state or communities.

Armenia, Iran sign protocol on simplified customs procedures

Armenia and Iran have signed a protocol on the exchange of advance information on goods and means of transport moved through their territories, aimed at facilitating customs procedures and creating more favorable conditions for law-abiding participants in foreign economic activity, under an initiative called the “Simplified Customs Corridor.”

The meeting highlighted the steps taken recently to strengthen cooperation and stressed the need for closer cooperation on various issues in the near future.

The protocol on the organization of the exchange of advance information on

Its main purpose is to create more favorable conditions for law-abiding participants in foreign economic activity and accelerate procedures related to customs control and clearance.

European Parliament approves temporary trade liberalization measures for Armenian products

The European Parliament has approved the European Commission's proposal to introduce a system of trade measures for products made in Armenia, temporarily removing customs duties on a wide range of goods imported from Armenia into the European Union.

The proposal was approved by the European Parliament's plenary session in Strasbourg with 583 votes in favor, 49 against and 39 abstentions.

Under the proposal, the EU will suspend customs duties on a number of Armenian products for two years. It will also establish duty-free import quotas for eight types of Armenian agricultural products, including grapes, apricots, cherries, peaches and cucumbers.

The next step is formal approval by the Council of the EU. The regulation will enter into force the day after its publication in the Official Journal of the European Union.

On September 2, the Council of the EU agreed to introduce temporary trade-liberalization measures for Armenian products to support Armenia's economy following trade restrictions recently imposed by Russia. These measures will liberalize around 80% of Armenian exports to the EU.

The Council endorsed the Commission proposal without changes, clearing the way for the regulation to be swiftly adopted following the European Parliament's vote.

According to the European Commission, the Russian restrictions have disrupted Armenia's traditional supply chains and significantly limited the country's access to its traditional export markets. The situation has had a particularly severe impact on small and medium-sized enterprises and agricultural producers, while also creating challenges for Armenia's economic resilience.

The EU views the initiative as a temporary measure to support the Armenian economy and create additional opportunities for exporters to access the EU market.

Azerbaijan, Armenia FMs plan to meet in New York this month

The foreign ministers of Armenia and Azerbaijan plan to meet in New York this month, Armenian Foreign Minister Ararat Mirzoyan said in response to a question from the Armenian service of Radio Liberty.

"We plan to meet in New York on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly session. There is no final agreement; it depends on the schedule," Mirzoyan said without elaborating on the agenda of the meeting.

The last meeting between the foreign ministers of the two countries took place in early September in Bishkek on the sidelines of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization summit. Following the meeting, Azerbaijani Foreign Minister Jeyhun Bayramov said that he and Mirzoyan had exchanged views on several issues and would meet again in the near future.

Armenian Defense Minister, military-industry executives meet in Beijing

Armenian Defense Minister Suren Papikyan has held a meeting in Beijing during his visit to China with top executives of several major military-industrial companies.

The Ministry of Defense said the meeting discussed cooperation.

Papikyan earlier participated in the 13th Beijing Xiangshan Forum in the Chinese capital.

Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan awarded the Hessian Peace Prize

Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan was awarded the Hessian Peace Prize at a ceremony held on Friday in Wiesbaden, Germany, for his efforts to establish peace in the South Caucasus.

Pashinyan's spokesperson Melania Harutyunyan posted photos from the ceremony held at the Landtag of Hesse, the German state's unicameral parliament.

Pashinyan said he was honored to receive the Hessian Peace Prize at a ceremony in Wiesbaden, Germany, on Friday, thanking the organizers for the recognition.

"It is a great honor to receive the Hessian Peace Prize for efforts aimed at establishing peace in the South Caucasus. Thank you for the recognition," Pashinyan wrote on his Facebook page.

The awarding ceremony was held at the Landtag of Hesse, the unicameral parliament of the German state of Hesse.

The Hessian Peace Prize has been presented by the Albert Osswald Foundation since 1994. It recognizes individuals who have rendered outstanding service to peace and international cooperation.

Draft of new Constitution expected to be published by end of year

Justice Minister Srбуhi Galyan

The draft of the new Constitution is expected to be published by the end of the year, following the conclusion of discussions with partners. Justice Minister Srбуhi Galyan announced this during the National Assembly-Government question-and-answer session.

She also stressed that the text circulated online in recent days had never been a working or draft version developed by the Ministry of Justice at any stage.

“First of all, I want to say that the text that was published has nothing to do with the text developed by the Ministry of Justice and has never been any kind of working or draft version, because there was another attempt to manipulate our denial by saying that perhaps at some point it had been a working version. No, a text with such content has never been the subject of discussion as a draft Constitution,” Galyan said.

According to the Minister, the actual text of the draft new Constitution is expected to be published by the end of 2026.

“As for the publication of the actual draft, we expect that by the end of the year, after concluding discussions with our partners, the text will be published,” she said.

According to Galyan, opposition forces also have an opportunity to become involved in discussions on the Constitution, including before the full text is published.

“As for the opposition’s involvement in discussing the text, even before the text is published, we are open and ready to discuss the provisions that have been or will be discussed by the Constitutional Reform Council. Why? Because the opposition has seats on the Constitutional Reform Council,” the Minister said.

According to her, after the draft is published, a broad phase of public communication and discussions is planned.

“After the text is published, we will embark on public communication and, essentially, put that text into circulation. We will gather the opinions of all interested bodies and individuals, discuss them and consider in what direction, if any, the text of the Constitution should be changed,” Galyan said.

The Justice Minister stressed that the document to be published will not be the final version.

“The text that will be published will not be the final text, but a draft that will go through the appropriate stages of circulation. And during those stages, I also do not rule out discussing the text and working together with our opposition colleagues, if there is a desire to do so,” Galyan said.

On September 8, a document circulated online that some users presented as a draft of Armenia’s new Constitution. On the same day, the Ministry of Justice officially denied the information, stating that the circulated document was not the draft of the new Constitution and that the information concerning it was false.

Istanbul Airport overtakes London Heathrow as world's most connected hub

Of the top 50 most connected airports in the world, 12 are located in Europe.

The world's most connected airports have just been revealed – and five of the top 10 megahubs are in Europe.

According to the latest Megahubs Index, Istanbul Airport in Türkiye claimed the top spot for 2026, overtaking London Heathrow.

The rankings are based on the number of possible connections between inbound and outbound flights within a six-hour window on the busiest day of the year, Sunday 2 August, and the number of destinations served from the airport.

Istanbul, which is the eighth busiest airport in the world in terms of capacity, has possible connections to 337 global destinations.

London Heathrow dropped down a place, compared to the busiest day last year. OAG notes that the airport has been “undoubtedly affected by the ongoing disruption to Middle East schedules, with its capacity to the region down by 25% this August”.

Other European megahubs in the top 10 include Amsterdam Airport Schiphol in third place, Frankfurt International Airport in seventh, and Paris Charles de Gaulle Airport in ninth.

Among the top 50, 12 megahubs are located in Europe, including: Madrid Adolfo Suarez-Barajas (18th), Istanbul Sabiha Gokcen (21st), Athens (22nd), Munich (23rd), Rome Fiumicino (27th), Barcelona (41st) and Zurich (45th).

Pashinyan says Armenia-Russia talks on railway concession continue

There is no new development in the discussions between Armenia and Russia over the concession management of Armenia's railway, but the talks are continuing, Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said on Thursday.

“There has been no change in the situation, the discussions continue. This is a very sensitive issue. It is our property, and we should have the ability to manage our property the way we want,” Pashinyan said at a press briefing.

He noted that Armenia has set no deadline for resolving the issue.

“We are calmly discussing this issue in conjunction with other issues. We are working to resolve this problem as quickly as possible and in as friendly a manner as possible,” Pashinyan said.

Armenia has sought to change the current concession arrangement, under which Russia manages the Armenian railway through South Caucasus Railway. Pashinyan has said the arrangement creates sanctions-related obstacles and deprives Armenia of certain competitive advantages. He has proposed transferring the concession management to a third country

The parties highly valued the level of cooperation established between the Armed Forces of Armenia and the Kansas National Guard, emphasizing its potential for continued development and expansion into new areas.

Armenia to Issue Commemorative Coin Marking 35th Anniversary of the Republic

The Central Bank of Armenia will put into circulation a silver commemorative coin dedicated to the 35th anniversary of the Republic of Armenia on September 14, 2026, the bank announced.

The period of Armenia's Third Republic began on September 21, 1991. Following independence, the country established its state symbols—the flag, coat of arms and national anthem—as well as state honors, including titles, orders and medals.

On November 22, 1993, Armenia introduced its national currency, the dram.

The establishment of an independent democratic state contributed to the preservation and strengthening of national identity and traditions. The Armenian Apostolic Church also assumed a greater role in public life. Among the most significant achievements of the independence era was the establishment of the national army as a defender of Armenian statehood.

Today, Armenia is a member of the United Nations, Commonwealth of Independent States, Council of Europe, World Trade Organization, Eurasian Economic Union and other international organizations.

The obverse of the commemorative coin features the coat of arms of the Republic of Armenia and an Armenian ornamental design.

The reverse depicts the National Assembly building, designed by architect M. Grigoryan in 1950, along with a stylized Armenian tricolor and the inscription “35th Anniversary of the Republic of Armenia.” It also features a line from Armenia's national anthem, Mer Hayrenik (“Our Fatherland”): “...May Armenia always be glorious.” The anthem's lyrics were written by Mikael Nalbandian, with music by Barsegh Kanachyan.

The coin was designed by Eduard Kurhinyan and minted at the Lithuanian Mint.

Yerevan Housing Market Grows Amid New Influx from Russia and the Armenian Diaspora

Apartment transactions in Yerevan nearly doubled in July, while apartment prices in the city center rose 12.7% year-over-year, according to the World Bank's Armenia Monthly Economic Update: September 2026.

The report said the accelerating growth of the real estate market was driven by increased demand stemming from a new influx of Russians and members of the Armenian diaspora.

Construction and non-trade services remained the main drivers of economic growth, expanding by 26.5% and 17%, respectively, in July. Overall economic activity growth, however, slowed from 7.4% in June to 6.5% in July. From the beginning of the year through July, economic activity increased by 7.7%.

Hakob Baghdasaryan, president of the real estate company Akcarn Holding, told CivilNet in an interview last month that the initial impact of an influx of Russians is typically felt in the rental market, followed by an effect on apartment sale prices.

“When the rental market becomes more active and rents increase, that puts upward pressure on the prices of properties under construction or being offered for sale,” Baghdasaryan said.

According to Baghdasaryan, a significant number of those who relocated to Armenia in 2022 initially rented apartments, but some are now purchasing homes.

He attributed the shift to the prolonged Russia-Ukraine war and concerns over the security of savings held in Russia.

About 300 sheep die in second “mystery” mass death at same Armenian village

About 300 sheep and lambs have died in unexplained circumstances at a sheep pen in Tsaghkunk village, Gegharkunik Province, marking the second such incident at the same location this year, local officials told Armenpress.

The animals were found piled on top of one another in several layers, with those underneath dead and showing nasal bleeding, while those in the upper layers were alive and active.

Radik Manukyan, head of the Agriculture Department of the Sevan municipal administration, said the incident was recorded early on September 17 at the sheep pen of Tsaghkunk resident Gurgen Gevorgyan.

A similar incident occurred at the same location on June 6, when 208 sheep died. The animals had not been mauled, and no puncture or scratch marks were found on their carcasses.

This time, too, it is difficult to link the incident to a wolf attack, Manukyan said. The number of dead sheep was higher, reaching about 300.

“Gurgen Gevorgyan keeps his own sheep and those belonging to villagers at his sheep pen. Early in the morning, he noticed that the sheep had gathered on top of one another, some of them no longer moving. It is difficult to determine at this point what caused the sheep to die. The only fact is that these 300 sheep had been crowded into an area of 20–25 square meters, piled on top of one another in several layers. The animals in the upper layer were alive and in a viable condition, while those found in the lower layers were lifeless and had nasal bleeding,” Manukyan said.

Police officers from Sevan and Rescue Service personnel from Armenia’s

Interior Ministry, representatives of the Gegharkunik governor’s office and the Sevan community administration, the community veterinarian and specialists from other relevant agencies arrived at the site early in the morning.

“For now, we are having difficulty solving this mystery, which has occurred for the second time in the same year. In any case, Tsaghkunk’s sheep-farming households have suffered serious losses, while the shepherd, Gurgen Gevorgyan, has found himself in a difficult situation as a result of this disaster. He has four children in his care and is socially vulnerable. The meat of the dead sheep was unfit for consumption and was completely destroyed. The extent of the losses is being determined,” Manukyan said.

Armenia’s Elina Avanesyan starts SP Open campaign with victory over Argentina’s Julia Riera

Armenian tennis player Elina Avanesyan has opened her campaign at the SP Open WTA 250 tournament in São Paulo, Brazil, with a victory.

Avanesyan faced Argentina’s Julia Riera in the opening round and won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, in a match that lasted about 1.5 hours.

EU Special Representative: Protecting Cultural Heritage Is an Essential Part of the Peace Process

The preservation and protection of cultural heritage are not only important components of peace processes but also fundamental values for the European Union, EU Special Representative for the South Caucasus and the Crisis in Georgia Magdalena Grono said in an interview with Armenpress.

Grono made the remarks during a September 14 visit to the Matenadaran—Mesrop Mashtots Institute of Ancient Manuscripts—accompanied by Armenia's Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs and International Trade Vahan Kostanyan.

"I am pleased that I had the opportunity to visit the Matenadaran today and see its remarkable collections of ancient Armenian manuscripts. I witnessed the true beauty and depth of this heritage and was deeply impressed," Grono said.

"I am very grateful to my hosts for providing this opportunity, and I firmly believe that preserving and supporting cultural heritage is not only an important part of peace processes but also an essential value for the European Union," she added.

Grono had previously visited Azerbaijan and traveled to Nagorno-Karabakh. Following that visit, she wrote on social media that there were "deeply divergent views and narratives regarding the origins of certain sites," without specifying which sites she was referring to. Her remarks prompted criticism in Armenia.

Asked by Armenpress to clarify her earlier statement, Grono said:

"I certainly do not dispute the past Armenian presence and rich legacy in the formerly conflict-affected areas of Karabakh. During my visit last week to the Kalbajar district, where I visited Dadivank, and the Aghdara district, where I visited Gandzasar, I had the opportunity for the first time to see this firsthand."

"I was also pleased to visit the Matenadaran in Yerevan again today. This heritage must be preserved and valued, while avoiding unfounded politicization and manipulation," Grono said.

Kim Kardashian awarded symbolic settlement of 1 euro for 2016 Paris jewel theft

Kim Kardashian was awarded a symbolic euro in damages on Tuesday by a Paris court as compensation for a 2016 incident, when the reality television star was tied up at gunpoint and robbed of approximately $6 million worth of jewelry.

Kardashian, who turns 46 on Oct. 21, sought the amount from the eight defendants who were convicted in May 2025 in a civil damages case.

She called the robbery "the most terrifying experience of my life."

In a joint statement to the news organizations, Kardashian and stylist Simone Harouche expressed gratitude to the French justice system.

"The experience was deeply traumatic, and its impact has stayed with us. Today's decision is not about the compensation, but about accountability and recognition," the two women said in their statement. "We are thankful to the Court and everyone who supported us throughout this process, and we hope to now move forward and continue to heal."

The court also awarded a former hotel receptionist who said he was traumatized by the incident $126,472. The hotel received a $57,741 settlement.

The robbers, called the "Grandpa Robbers" in France because of their advanced ages, wore ski masks and were disguised as police officers when they pulled off the heist.

Six of them were in their 60s and 70s when they were tried for armed robbery, kidnapping, gang association and other charges.

At the time, it was the largest robbery in France in 20 years. Most of the jewels were never recovered, including Kardashian's $4 million engagement ring given to her by then-husband Kanye West, according to the news organization.

Kardashian in court in 2025 told Aomar Ait Khedache, who was 69 at the time and considered the mastermind of the robbery, that she forgave him, but that doing so did not diminish her trauma.

He spent three years in jail, according to the news organization.

Der Matossian and Gzoyan Publish Landmark Volume on the Concentration Camps of the Armenian Genocide

Bloomsbury Publishing has announced the publication of The Concentration Camps of the Armenian Genocide, a 520-page edited volume by Prof. Bedross Der Matossian and Dr. Edita Gzoyan. The book is part of the series Armenians in the Modern and Early Modern World, edited by Bedross Der Matossian of the University of Nebraska–Lincoln.

Although scholarship on the Armenian Genocide has expanded significantly in recent decades, the concentration-camp system established by the Ottoman authorities, particularly in present-day Syria, remains insufficiently studied. This is the first volume to offer an in-depth and multifaceted examination of these camps. Its chapters trace the origins and development of the camp system and document the atrocities committed at sites such as Deir ez-Zor, Ras al-Ain, Meskene, and elsewhere.

Featuring twenty-one chapters by historians and social scientists from Armenia, France, Germany, the United States, the United Kingdom, Lebanon, and Australia, the volume brings together diverse disciplinary and geographical perspectives. It also foregrounds survivors' voices through memoirs and diaries that document their experiences of deportation and life in the camps. Literary reflections and biographical studies of Armenian and foreign individuals connected with the camps and humanitarian missions further enrich the volume's interdisciplinary approach.

The contributors examine the experiences of deportees along deportation routes and in transit and concentration camps; the geography and spatial organization of the camps; the brutal realities of daily life; the distribution of humanitarian assistance and the development of self-help mechanisms; interactions between deportees and local populations; moral and physical forms of resistance; and the experiences of children. The volume also considers Ottoman laws, decrees, and administrative practices relating to the camps and situates the Armenian case within the broader comparative history of concentration camps and genocide.

This project was generously supported by the Friedman Fund, the Hymen Rosenberg Professorship, and the Department of History at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln.

"This has been one of the most demanding projects we have undertaken," Der Matossian and Gzoyan commented. "One of the volume's distinguishing features is that it brings together renowned experts and emerging scholars, including a substantial number of Armenia-based researchers. Over the course of three years, we worked closely with the contributors to ensure the scholarly quality and historical accuracy of each chapter. Repeatedly engaging with accounts of the suffering and violence endured by Armenians in these camps was difficult, but it also reinforced our commitment to documenting this understudied dimension of the genocide."

"We consider this one of the most important books published in the field of Armenian Genocide in the past few years. We hope that it will make a significant contribution to Armenian Genocide scholarship and encourage further research on the concentration-camp system and what is often described as the second phase of the genocide," they continued.

Dr. Bedross Der Matossian is the Elwood N. and Katherine Thompson Distinguished Professor of Modern World History at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln. A Guggenheim Fellow, he is the author, editor, and co-editor of nine books, including Shattered Truths: Denial of Genocides in the Digital Age, forthcoming from the University of Nebraska Press in late fall 2026. He also serves as Director of Genocide Research at the Zoryan Institute.

Dr. Edita Gzoyan teaches at the American University of Armenia (AUA). She is a genocide studies scholar specializing in the legal and historical dimensions of the Armenian Genocide. She is Editor-in-Chief of the International Journal of Armenian Genocide Studies (IJAGS). Her research focuses on gendered violence, forced child transfer, and international criminal law. She has also edited scholarly volumes, including The Silenced Crime: Forcible Child Transfer During the Armenian Genocide (Brill, 2025).
